Capital Area United Way

Rebuilding our community together

For 100 years, Capital Area United Way has built our community by building coalitions of community members. From the Spanish Flu Pandemic in 1919 to the Covid-19 Pandemic today, United Way has created the space and tools for our neighbors and friends to help each other. Our Covid-19 response shows the collaboration that United Way applies to all community problems:

Capital Area United Way supports over 30 programs that serve over 100,000 tri-county residents every year. From education to food security to financial literacy, this community is stronger because people like you support United Way. Thank you.

WHO NEEDS YOUR HELP?

I am a carpenter and own a construction company. No one wants me even working on the outside of their house. My wife is an in home care nurse, and all of her clients have family home taking care of them. It's been hard.

—CHRIS M.

My hours at work have been cut down. My kids dad is not working so I have no income coming in.

—ASHLEY S.

My daughter goes to school, we are trying to do the whole homeschooling. We did not have everything we needed. No printer, no computer. I have a neighbor who printed some stuff for me. I get food stamps, they had raised to the max, so that has been a help. I work at a factory in Howell. I am out of work right now. We got a robocall that they will not be coming back until the week of the 20th.

—PHILLIDA B.

I work in health care, but my hours have been cut significantly. On an average day we would see 200 people a day and yesterday we only had 6.

—ZAMIE M.
